

Tweet Buster: Valuation lessons, tips for volatile market & Kedia's wisdom

NEW DELHI: It was an action-packed week for the domestic stock market with RBI money policy, Opec meeting and fresh worries around possible escalation in trade tensions.

The coming week promises to be equally exciting with the state elections outcome lined up for December 11.

So, the big question is: how would one navigate the pre-election result volatility? Independent market expert Sandip Sabharwal has a solution that might help. His mantra is simple – Don't trade!

The perfect way The best way to Trade the Election day volatility Don't trade

– sandip sabharwal (@sandipsabharwal) 1544243594000

However, Shyam Sekhar of iThought and market veteran Basant Maheshwari do not seem to agree with Sabharwal, as these tweets would suggest.

*More the discussion about an impending event lesser the impact once the event actually happens. Just too many peopl...
<https://t.co/5FUHZJRGgG>*

– Basant Maheshwari (@BMTheEquityDesk) 1544238818000

*Will Voter chemistry trump arithmetic in Telangana? Will Voter anger bridge a massive vote share gap in MP? How w...
<https://t.co/yGRITlqAPf>*

– Shyam Sekhar (@shyamsek) 1544112561000

Sabharwal took to twitter to post his view on this week's monetary policy. He didn't approve of the RBI decision and called the MPC statement "ridiculous".

a.

*#MPC and @RBI deliver another ridiculous statement. However they are in a bind of their own. Shifted to Calibrated...
<https://t.co/SJn7SSdUdE>*

– sandip sabharwal (@sandipsabharwal) 1544000830000

b.